Josiah Henson (1789-1883) spent 41 years as a slave. He was a dynamic, driven man with unyielding principles who overcame incredible odds to escape his cruel masters and improve the lives of hundreds of freed people throughout his long life. Though immortalized by Harriet Beecher Stowe in her seminal, society-changing novel Uncle Tom's Cabin and catapulted to international fame in 1852, his story has been largely lost to history.

Until now. Including interviews with leading experts and Henson descendants, JOSIAH is an unmissable documentary about one of history's greatest lost figures.

To accompany the documentary and to be released simultaneously is the definitive biography of Josiah Henson's life, THE ROAD TO DAWN: Josiah Henson and the Story That Sparked the Civil War (PublicAffairs; on sale May 15, 2018), by author and documentarian Jared A. Brock. The book delivers the full narrative of a great man's great life—a life that symbolized the definitive triumph of the human spirit over the brutality of slavery. In this excellent biography, Brock chronicles Henson's 41 years in bondage, his eventual escape to freedom, and his rise as a great preacher and orator who used his freedom to uplift his fellow man for the entirety of his life.

With both the book and the film, Brock has created a comprehensive portrait that restores a hero of the abolitionist movement to his rightful place in history—a hero whose life speaks of a love of humanity and invites us to follow in his steps.
